Project description:

The overall objective of the project was to enable civil society to evaluate, assess and monitor the public money spending through the existing public procurement practices by facilitating the policy dialogue between authorities and CSOs.

This project is built on the positive assumption that civil society and state agencies are bound to cooperate, and that despite the issues, civil society can be a valuable element of a better public procurement system, if rules will be respected, and when CSOs will be capable to undertake monitoring and evaluation at certain international/domestic standards.

Expected results:

- 16 training sessions organised (with 3 study visits) for CSOs showing willingness and building up capacities to access and monitor public procurement.
- One Procurement Monitoring Handbook (in 3 languages: Romanian, Russian and English) to assist civil society organizations and citizens in procurement monitoring and detecting corrupt cases leading to damage use of public funds developed, published and disseminated.
- One field-tailored Module of Training for civil servants specialized in public procurement developed, published and disseminated.
- One Guide (step-by-step) on the procedures (in 2 languages: Romanian and Russian) for preparing and submitting complaints for economic operators developed, published and disseminated.
- 8 workshops with economic operators (participants or those who want to participate in public tenders) organised.
- 8 in-depth interviews with economic operators (participants in public procurements procedure) carried out.
- 6 round table organised.
- 6 policy papers on public procurement issues for authorities with competence in the area developed published and disseminated.
- 2 Confidence Index in Public Procurement System elaborated and launched.
